REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

1. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: the prior art does not disclose or fairly teach the claimed saw blade. The closest art, to Rehnberg, 2,508,042, teaches a similar blade, having a steel core with an axle bore and a plurality of copper metal sheets to which diamond particles are adhered, the sheet then bent, pressed between dies to mold around the diamond and be cut into segments, then press fitted into slots cut into the steel core. '042 does not disclose that the sheets are welded and jointed to the periphery of the core, that the copper sheets are made of a copper alloy, but most importantly does not disclose that each sheet segment comprises a plurality of openings, and teeth adjacent each opening, that when pressed between a pair of molds holds the diamond in place. '042 discloses two embodiments that are most pertinent to the claimed invention. The first embodiment, of figures 6-16, does disclose adhering a single diamond particle layer to a V-shaped copper sheet, the sheet is then pressed between dies that compress and cut the sheet into smaller segments, the segments then force fit into slots in the steel core. The second embodiment, of figures 17-21, applies the abrasive directly to the slot, then presses the rim between dies to enclose the abrasive within the slots, see especially figure 21. Neither of these embodiments produces the saw blade claimed by applicant. While it is known to weld abrasive segments to a saw core, and copper alloy is an old and well known material, the prior art does not disclose the segments formed of copper-alloy sheets having a plurality of openings, and teeth adjacent each opening, that when pressed between a pair of molds holds the diamonds in place.

2. Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
